The Style of Raphael

Raphael was heavily influenced by the works of the early Renaissance painters. He attended the workshop of Perugino, whose graceful, open landscapes and gentle figures were widely admired. A skillful student from the beginning, Raphael mastered Perugino's delicate, ornamental style. Late in 1504, Raphael moved to Florence, where he incorporated the innovations of Florentine painters, especially those of Leonardo da Vinci. Raphael transformed the fifteenth-century style of his earliest teachers into something new and influential. For later generations, Raphael's art came to represent an ideal of perfection, grace, and harmonious balance. His works are still admired and studied throughout the world today.

Which of the following best summarizes the passage?

- A Raphael was considered the greatest of the Renaissance painters and better than Leonardo da Vinci.
- B Raphael was a brilliant painter who quickly began teaching his teachers more than they were teaching him.
- C Raphael was one of Leonardo da Vinci's best students, and he greatly influenced other Italian painters.
- D Raphael was a master Renaissance painter, and his work crossed beyond the time and culture in which he lived.
